Discover 38 of the World's Most Famous Diamonds

EXCLUSIVE OPPORTUNITY

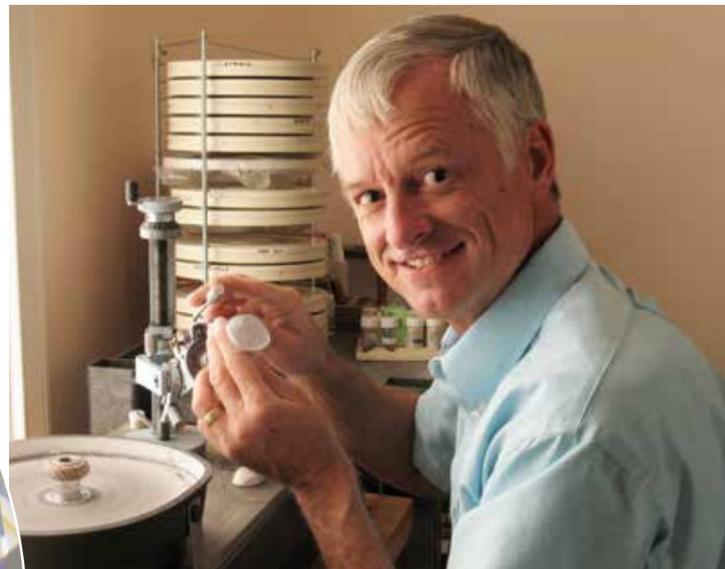

The most famous diamond in the world - Koh-I-Noor - is amongst many diamonds that have been lost throughout history as they were either re-cut or their current whereabouts is unknown.

Thanks to many hours of research and expert analysis, there was sufficient technical and scientific data to allow accurate assessments of each stone.

The history of these famous diamonds captured the attention of Scott Sucher, who first became fascinated with diamonds at the age of 14. Now a retired US Air Force pilot, Sucher continues his research on the world's most famous diamonds to the extent that he has created a collection of near-perfect replicas.

"A replica re-creates the size, shape and colour of the original precisely - something that is especially relevant to diamonds such as these because so few people are familiar with the originals."

Scott Sucher, Master of Famous Diamond Replicas

About Scott Sucher

When one thinks of diamonds, Tijeras, New Mexico is not the first place that springs to mind, but it's home to Scott Sucher, the Master behind the research and replicas that form the World's Most Famous Diamonds.

Scott Sucher's lifelong interest in geology commenced when a local museum hosted an exhibition of famous diamonds made of quartz when he was just a young boy. Whenever he could find time in his busy life, he published a collection of internet articles and lectures. Sucher points out that his replicas are not mere representations or imitations. This distinction is very important.

While a representation is a 'stand-in' for its authentic counterpart, it is not necessarily accurate. A replica re-creates the size, shape, and color of the original precisely - something that is especially relevant to diamonds such as these because so few people are familiar with the originals.

Experience a captivating journey at the World Famous Diamonds stand with Scott Sucher. Join him each day of the fair as he unveils the stories behind these exquisite gems. Don't miss this chance to engage with Scott, learn about his fascinating journey, and uncover the rich histories of these renowned diamonds.

Benchies to shine in the spotlight

This year's International Jewellery Fair will feature The Benchies Wall of Fame.

Manufacturing jewellers 'Benchies' are the backbone of the jewellery industry and their unique skills, precision, and creativity are often overlooked by the wider industry.

Benchies transform raw materials into inspiring pieces, bringing designs to life. They work closely with designers and customers, translating concepts into tangible jewellery that showcases personal style.

For more than 15 years Jeweller magazine has celebrated the artistry of our industry's artisans with the popular column: 'My Bench'.

As part of this year's fair, we asked Jeweller to collate the monthly interviews with Australia's manufacturing jewellers to be showcased for The Benchies Wall of Fame. Visitors will be able to see a large collection of the up-close and personal interviews showing the Benchie's designs, in a special installation.
